

The university offers international certification courses for behavioural analysts to improve global health and well-being

1. The Graduate Institute of Rehabilitation Counselling has been conducting international certification courses for behavioural analysts since 2010 (links to certification). Five related courses are offered each year, with approximately 8–20 and 90 students per course and per year, respectively. Revisions leading to the fourth edition of the certification courses were completed in 2015. Over the past five years, a total of seven students passed the Examination for International Certification of Behavioural Analysts and successfully obtained their licenses.
2. Teachers from this institute offer international certification courses within the School of Continuing Education, together with transnational collaboration with the University of Nevada's Department of Psychology. A hybrid teaching mode (remote learning + group-based face-to-face discussions) is adopted, leading to refined, high-quality certification courses with international cooperation. Two stages of courses were held from 2017 to 2021, with each stage comprising six certification courses. In total, 58 students benefited from the two stages and 45 students completed all the courses and obtained course certificates. Teaching for the two stages was completed in January and May of 2021, respectively. To date, 6 students have passed the certification examination, while the remaining students plan to take the examination between August and December.

Verified Course Sequence Directory

Search for Verified Course Sequences by country. Only active Verified Course Sequences will appear in this directory. Course sequences and VCS Coordinator information are renewed and updated annually. Please note that different editions have specific course content and hour requirements.

Links:

1. Correspondence stating that the certification courses passed the audit, and related links: <https://www.abainternational.org/vcs/directory.aspx>.
2. Correspondence stating that the certification courses passed the audit, admissions guide, and related links: <https://www.abainternational.org/vcs/directory.aspx>; Website information (ABAI authorises the university to offer international certification courses)